

Central Hobart Plan

A structure plan to guide growth & development

Movement

Key elements of the draft 'Plan' have been summarised into fact sheets. Please refer to the full draft structure plan available at yoursay.hobartcity.com.au

The Plan provides for streetscape upgrades for better movement, and improved amenity and street vibrancy. It recognises the key connections between a range of public transport modes, addresses more efficient car parking, and aims for greater pedestrian focus in Central Hobart (see section 3.5 of the draft Plan).

In 20 years, improvements to public transport, more car sharing, and increased walking and cycling options have reduced the dominance of cars in Central Hobart, with far-reaching benefits for citizens and the environment.

Walking, and using micromobility options such as cycling and e-scooters, is easier and more popular because of improved safety, accessibility and other supporting features in Central Hobart's urban design.

Commuter car parks are located near major arterial routes with regular transport services and better walking and cycling routes bringing commuters into a safer and more amenable central city.

State and local transport strategy

The Tasmanian Government and City of Hobart are developing a Hobart Transport Network Operations Plan (HTNOP). It will inform decision-making for Hobart's transport network and associated future land uses.

The HTNOP identifies the future 'movement' and 'place' roles of the city's streets and notes the key active travel, freight and public transport routes, as well as those that are for lingering, socialising and shopping. This will lead to a balanced movement framework for all users, not just private vehicles. It will also influence the future design and management of these streets, identifying changes that may need to be made over time to improve their movement and place functions.

Please refer to the full structure plan for more information.
